

Ramon y Cajal “tenure track” position at the University of Salamanca, Spain

The Group of Oceanic Geosciences of the University of Salamanca is offering a Tenure track position for 5 years to incorporate an outstanding candidate with a strong background in any of the following fields: Micropaleontology, Paleoceanography, Paleoclimatology, Biostratigraphy, microfossils as proxies for paleoenvironments, microfossils and biogeochemical cycles, microplankton and ocean acidification. After the completion of the 5 years contract this position can be transformed to an associate Professor at the University of Salamanca. This is a position offered within the Spanish “Ramon y Cajal” international call. A list of successful candidates in the last call can be seen here. Please look at the candidates in the field of Earth Sciences (Ciencias de la Tierra).

Ramon y Cajal Spanish Program: This program is open to scientists all over the world that want to develop his/her career in spanish scientific and academic institutions. The candidates should apply to a special nation-wide spanish call “Ramon y Cajal” Program open until January 16 th, 2018. This is a competitive call and the successful candidates will be selected by a national Committee of prestigious researchers in their field. Only those candidates that are selected by this Committee can get the position in our Group of Research in Salamanca.

Application procedure: The electronic application form (solicitud) and regulations of this call can be found in the webpage of the Ministerio de Economia de España. The candidate should write a Summary of his/her research career and the main research line that she/he has carried out as well as enter the CV online with a complete list of publications.

The salary will be 33,720 euros and an additional Grant of 40,000 euros for scientific research. During the 5 year contract the candidate can apply for spanish or international projects as PI. The successful candidate should carry out research in the fields mentioned above and a limited teaching can apply.

Requirements: The applicants must hold a PhD between January 1st, 2007 and December 31st, 2014. English required.

For further information contact Francisco J. Sierro: sierro@usal.es.